

Extravaganza date changed

Elk Point Chamber of Commerce has changed the date of their Christmas Extravaganza to December 5, due to heavy competition by the Community Choir Concert and the Elks Christmas Party for their original date of December 12. Hours will remain at the traditional 6:00 to 11:00 p.m.

Several other changes were made at the Extravaganza Committee's first organizational meeting last week. This year, only one block of Main Street, between 50th and 49th Avenues, will be blocked off to traffic, with the bonfire situated in this area. Due to recent new construction on the former location of the rink, there will be no outdoor skating for the Extravaganza this year.

However, many of the favorite activities will be back. Santa Claus will make his annual appearance, draws will be made for Elk Point shopping Bucks, and hay rides and hot chocolate will most likely be on the agenda. The coloring contest will have an earlier start, and will run until December 12 before prizes are awarded.

The Chamber is also hoping to continue the silent auction of decorated trees, wreaths and swags, and is currently approaching local non-profit groups to see if they are interested in participating. If your group would be interested in decorating a tree, wreath or swag to be auctioned off, with proceeds going toward your group, please call Diane at 724-4087.

Watch for further details on Extravaganza after the next planning meeting, November 12.

Town Council reorganizes for 1997-98

The Town of Elk Point held their annual organizational meeting last week, setting out guidelines for the coming year and assigning councillors to committees and boards for the new term.

Council meetings will remain on the second Monday of the month, except when a Monday holiday falls on that date, in which case the meeting will move to the following day. Council honorariums and travel expenses will also remain the same as last year.

Standing committee appointments are as follows:

Executive Committee: Mayor Buck, councillors Ron Smith, Dave Yake, Bill Schuhmacher.

Public Works: Councillors Schuhmacher, Yake and Walter Lesyk.

Economic Committee: Councillors Schuhmacher, Smith, Mae Hendrickson, Louis Verhagen.

Public Safety and Environment: Councillors Lesyk, Hendrickson, Verhagen.

Ambulance and Physician Recruitment: Mayor Buck, Councillor Smith.

Board and Committee appointments are as follows:

Assessment Review Board: Councillors Hendrickson, Schuhmacher, Verhagen.

Chamber of Commerce: Town Manager Myron Goyan.

Canada Day Committee: Councillor Hendrickson,

Community Policing Committee: Councillor Hendrickson.

HALLOWEEN FUN AND FROLIC packed the Elk Point Elementary School gym Friday night as entire families turned out in force for a gala Halloween dance. Costumes, music and many prizes helped to make the evening a roaring success. Here, "Raggedy Ann" is surrounded by eager students as more prize draws are made.

Emmes spread heartfelt teen suicide prevention message

It's a subject they wish they didn't have to talk about, and that they wish their audience didn't have to hear about, but Darlene and Dale Emme have addressed audiences across North America and around the world with a heartfelt plea to stop the tragedy of teen suicide.

The escalating toll of death by suicide is something the Emmes know all too well. Their 17 1/2 year old son Michael shot himself in September 1994, and shook his family and friends to the core. "I don't want this to happen to anyone else," his mother told last Thursday's audience of students at F. G. Miller High School.

News of the devastating tragedy swept through his school, bringing it to a standstill. As his stunned schoolmates gathered around in support of the grieving family, the Yellow Ribbon Program was born. When these teens asked what they could do to help, Mrs. Emme's strongest message was "don't do this." Her urging to take problems to teachers, counsellors, clergy, family or friends, and to listen when a troubled friend approaches them, was copied down by a friend of the Emmes and printed on slips of yellow paper, tied with a yellow ribbon. Yellow was Michael's trademark color, and his most treasured possession the bright yellow Mustang car where he ended his life. Five hundred of the beribboned scrolls were taken home by those who attended his funeral.

One yellow slip found its way to a high school teacher in Casper, Wyoming, who phoned the Emmes to suggest that this program could help teens on a much larger scale, with its message that it is OK to need help, and to give help. Mrs. Emme reminded the students that "suicide is not about death. It's about unrelenting, horrible pain" that leads a person to want to end it all.

Dale Emme explained that the yellow ribbon card gives the bearer permission to ask for help, "even when you can't find the words." There are those who do care and will help by taking the person seriously, listening and respecting

RCMP warn: Lock it or lose it

By Sgt. Peter Sherstan
Elk Point RCMP

As the weather turns colder, we often leave our vehicles running in order to defrost windows or simply to warm them up. However, it should be realized that a vehicle that is running, but not locked, presents an attractive target to those interested in theft, vandalism or simply joyriding.

Although we reside in a relatively small and easy going community, not everyone living in the area shares the same values. In the first nine months of 1997, the Elk Point RCMP received 28 complaints in relation to stolen vehicles. For the same period last year, only 16 vehicles were stolen. In many cases, the keys were left in the vehicle.

Even if the key are removed, an unlocked car or truck is an inviting target to a thief. They may help themselves to anything that is left not only in the cab of the vehicle, but also, with push button trunk releases, virtually anything that is in the trunk. This often includes cellular phones, registration documents, CDs or cassette tapes, and tools.

Therefore, whether you live in town, on the reserve, or in the rural area, please consider locking your vehicle before walking away from it. And remember that young children and infants SHOULD NEVER be left unattended in a running vehicle for ANY length of time.

Suicide is no joke!

By Deanna Easthope
FCSS Director

Suicide is a universal human concern. People who kill themselves come from a diverse range of backgrounds. Death by suicide is a reality for individuals from many different cultural and religious groups and from all educational and socioeconomic levels.

Any one of us, or someone we love, could be vulnerable to considering suicide as an escape during a time of personal crisis. Sometimes, people are so bummed out by their problems they don't think they can take it anymore. All they can think about is ending the pain. They don't believe they have any choices, except to end their pain by killing themselves. They don't really want to die, they just want to end the pain. This statement needs repeating. "They don't really want to die, they just want to end the pain." If someone you know is talking about suicide, it's no joke. They may really need you to take them seriously.

Fortunately, there's a lot you can do to help your friend.

LISTEN: Listen for the thoughts and feelings behind your friend's words.

KEEP TRYING: Often, if you ask, "What's wrong?" people will shrug you off. Don't give up. People who are suicidal feel very, very alone. You'll have to keep trying until you convince them that you genuinely care.

ASK QUESTIONS: The best way to find out if they're thinking of committing suicide is to ask them... "Are things so bad that you're thinking of killing yourself?" If the answer is yes, ask them... "How are you going to do it?" "When are you going to do it?" "Do you have what you need to do it (gun, pills, knife, etc.)?" The more dangerous the method and the more definite their plan, the greater the risk that they'll attempt suicide.

GET HELP: Don't ever agree to keep someone's suicide intentions a secret. A mad friend is better than a dead friend. Try to get them to agree on who to tell, but do not wait to tell someone who can help. If you think this person will try to kill himself soon, do not leave them alone until help arrives.

WHO CAN HELP: Parents, relatives, neighbors, friends; a school counsellor or teacher, the clergy, the Crisis Line in St. Paul (1-800-263-3045) (24 hrs), Mental Health Services 645-6307 (a counsellor comes to Elk Point every second Tuesday at the Elk Point Health Centre — you need to call the St. Paul number to make an appointment), and the St. Therese Health Centre (they have a psych. unit) at 645-4323.

Last Thursday, the Emmes came to Elk Point and spoke to the Junior/Senior High School students about teen suicide. They explained the "Yellow Ribbon Program." Also, every post office mail box in the Town of Elk Point received one of these pamphlets. This is really a community awareness program about suicide and we all can help each other. Suicide is no joke. If anyone would like more information, I have pamphlets about suicide prevention in the FCSS office. Feel free to drop by our office or give us a call at 724-3800.

Report from the Legislature

New initiatives will improve competitive edge

By Paul Langevin, MLA
Lac La Biche - St. Paul

The department of Advanced Education and Career Development has devised two new initiatives which will improve our province's competitive edge in the global market. Both of these programs are designed to assist the development and retention of a skilled workforce, as well as job growth and wealth creation for Albertans.

As a result of consultations with employers, employees, and apprentices, the Minister of Advanced Education and Career Development recently announced a series of actions that will serve to improve apprenticeship and industry training in order to meet Alberta's future needs for a skilled workforce. These include:

- * Providing a greater variety of options for training;
- * Improving financial support for apprentices;
- * Increasing promotion of opportunities to begin learning a trade and recognition of prior learning;
- * Increasing training opportunities for youth;
- * Developing a system of more flexible certification of workers, and
- * Strengthening the industry advisory committee network to achieve broader industry involvement and to encourage cross-trade dialogue among the provincial apprenticeship committees.

The changes are designed to better suit the needs of both students and employers, as well as to stimulate awareness and interest in apprenticeship programs. There is a growing demand by both employers and workers in Alberta for programs leading to skills certification and upgrading, with the number of registered apprentices increasing by approximately 14% in 1996 over the previous four years.

Alberta currently has 50 designated trades and four designated occupations. Designated trades are those that are recognized in our legislation, and across Canada. Designated professions are recognized by legislation but are governed by industry.

On December 31, 1996, there were 24,836 apprentices registered in Alberta, 7687 of whom were new apprentices. Apprenticeship programs lead to employment for a substantial number of Albertans, concentrated primarily in the construction, manufacturing, retail and wholesale trades. The 1995/96 graduates met with great success after completing their training; 91% of graduates were employed by the spring of 1997, and of these, 75% were working in jobs directly related to their apprenticeship training.

Nutrition notes

Nutrition for the elderly

By Shelley Miller-Hertes, RD
Elk Point Health Centre

Someone recently told me, "I don't know why they call these the 'golden years,' it feels more like the 'rusty years.' It is true, getting old does take its toll on the body. Chronic disease, long-term drug therapy, social isolation, physical disabilities and cognitive impairment can make adequate nutrition hard to achieve.

Generally, as we age our energy requirements decrease. This is due to less muscle, a lower metabolic rate and less physical activity. As energy requirements decrease, it's a good idea to cut back on energy intake or you'll find yourself putting on extra pounds. Don't cut back on the basic four food groups, instead get rid of the extras (eg. pie, cake,

Daily fluid requirements are approximately 30 mL fluid per kilogram of body weight. So for a 70 kg person that's 2100 mL of fluid. The frail elderly are at risk of dehydration due to a reduced thirst sensation. A low fluid intake may result from forgetfulness, self-imposed restrictions to control urinary frequency, or restrictions imposed by health problems (eg. arthritis can make it difficult to pour yourself a glass of water). Excessive caffeine can also cause dehydration, so you may want to limit your coffee intake to 2 1/2 cups per day.

Poor fitting dentures or several teeth missing can make chewing difficult. You may need to chop or blend your food to make it easier to chew. A stroke can also affect your ability to swallow, making thickened fluids and a pureed diet necessary. You may find a hamburger steak easier to chew than roast beef, or may need to eat cooked vegetables instead of raw ones.

Constipation is frequent. The causes are many — reduced muscle tone, reduced motility of the gastrointestinal tract, and some medications contribute to constipations. Try a high fiber diet, plenty of fluids, physical activity (if you are able) and a regular bowel routine (same time each day).

These are but a few of the many factors that can influence the nutritional status of the elderly. If you have an area of concern, you can then consult the appropriate health professional to get your nutrition and health back on track.

Proposed changes to the CPP: What the government is NOT telling you

By Leon Benoit, MP
Lakeland Constituency

Our public pension system is being threatened. And, for once, it's not because of what the government is doing, but because of what it is doing.

The government has known for many years that our population is aging and our birth rate is declining. This has serious consequences for a public pension plan which operates on a pay-as-you-go basis. Currently, the unfunded liability of the Canada Pension Plan (what the fund owes to contributors, retired and working) is around $560 billion.

During the late 1970s, 80s and early 90s, the government simply ignored the ramifications of the shift in demographics. Not until the Chief Actuary of the CPP blew the whistle on the government's past mismanagement of this plan and predicted dire consequences if the plan continued on a pay-as-you-go basis, did the present government take notice. Unfortunately, the action they are taking is not in the best interest of Canadians.

The Liberals introduced changes to the CPP on October 6. They immediately limited debate on the issue to ensure the Bill clears the House and Senate before the end of the year. They want increases in premiums and changes to benefits to be implemented starting in January 1998.

Probably a bigger reason the Liberals are so keen to pass this so quickly is that they're afraid of a massive grassroots backlash once Canadians find out the negative consequences of the changes:

* Employers will lay off staff, or restrict their hiring because over the next 6 years their CPP payroll taxes will increase by 73% — as much as $700 per year per employee.

* Take home pay will shrink, in some cases by as much as $700 per year. For many people that is a good portion of their mortgage payments.

* Self-employed Canadians will soon be paying a tenth of their earnings straight to the CPP fund. For some this means a total of $3270 per year.

* Younger workers' investments in the CPP will net them only 64 cents or less for every dollar they contribute. This is assuming, of course, the plan is even there for them when they retire.

An alternative proposal

The Reform Party has proposed a five-point alternative to the CPP called the Super-RRSP. This proposal calls for moving from the present pay-as-you-go public CPP fund to a fully funded mandatory plan based on individual accounts. It would be funded in the same manner as the CPP (payroll deductions with both the employee and the employer making contributions).

This would provide Canadians with a secure source of income for their retirement, which in the majority of cases would be higher than that which they would have received under the CPP. For many people with low to moderate incomes, it would enable them to accumulate large amounts of personal savings. In many cases their private pension account would be their single largest asset and, because this is the property of an individual, it could be passed on to survivors upon death.

Of course, it would take time for such a plan to be phased in, perhaps even as long as 20 years. In the meantime, benefits to Canadians currently aged 60 and older would be equal to what they would have received under the CPP.

Younger Canadians would gradually be moved into the Super-RRSP plan. All Canadians in the workforce would receive benefits at least equal to what they would have received under the CPP. Either way it's a win-win situation for Canadians.

The unfunded liability of the CPP (what the fund owes to contributors, retired and working) is around $560 billion. In addressing this, the government has chosen to stay the course and jack up premiums. This places the cost of correcting past mistakes mostly on our children, while returning to them an unreasonably low pension for the money they invested. All Canadians need to take a good look at the changes to the CPP proposed by the government, before it's too late.

Teen suicide prevention

that person's feelings. Emme said that the night Michael died, he had received a devastating phone call from his girlfriend, breaking off their relationship. He called five of his friends for help in dealing with this, and the last person he spoke to "didn't take him seriously. She told him she was busy and would talk to him in the morning." Emme urged those who are approached for help: "if it's in your power, stay with them, and call for help."

Ninety five percent of suicides are preventable, Emme said, but "they are taking the lives of our most precious resource. We need to find a way to stop it."

He also urged that if you know someone who has lost a family member or friend to suicide, or has attempted suicide themselves, "don't stop talking to them." They still need to know you are thinking about them.

Mrs. Emme acknowledged that "yes, it hurts to talk about this, but we do it to save other families the grief." About a thousand teens have been saved by using the Yellow Ribbon cards. "Your school and community must care an awful lot about you to get us to come here," she concluded.

Hockey: nightmare on 51 Street?

By Doug Bassett
Elk Point Minor Hockey

Was it the Trick or Treat, or was it a nightmare on 51 Street? Either way, it wasn't pretty when the Bantam Lightning suffered their first loss of the season, when the big bad Bisons from Wainwright stomped into town Halloween night. From the opening faceoff it was all Bisons who controlled the play with their big defence that was impossible to penetrate and who outshot the Lightning 41 to 14. The Bisons are a solid club with big players who are good skaters, handle the puck well and controlled the play throughout the game. Not to make any excuses for the Lightning, they didn't come to play on this Friday night and spent most of the night shorthanded, which cost them three goals. They were, however, missing one of their key men on the point, a tough guy, who likes to play rough, and can make a difference, veteran defenceman Brett Kopeck, who is out with back spasms, and hopefully will return next week.

Saturday night the Lightning played a bit better, but still not to their potential, bouncing back when they travelled to Marwayne and coming out on top 6-5 in a close contest. Two goals each for Scott Swain and Darcy Stafford, with Travis Brown scoring the winner in this contest with 5:20 remaining in the third. A past Elk Point player who now lives in Dewberry, Benny Matthews, showed he still had his touch when he scored four of the Marwayne goals. This coming weekend the Lightning play two old rivals, travelling to Kitscoty on Saturday to play our old friends the Bulldogs, and then on Sunday they are off to St. Paul to play the top ranked team in the league. This should be a good one.

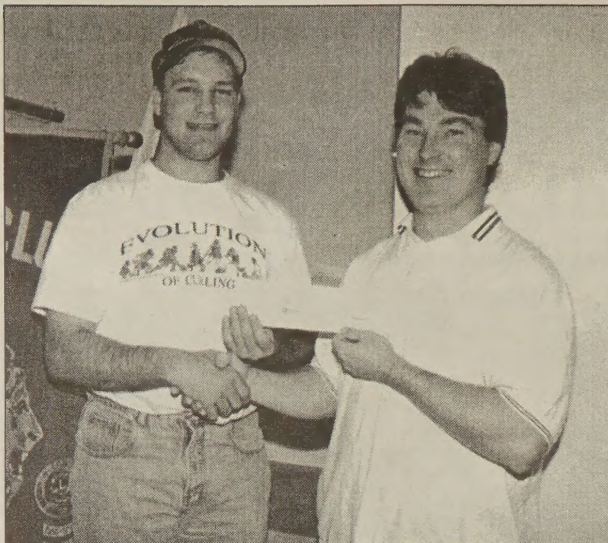

In other hockey news this past weekend, up in Cold Lake, both of the Elk Point Atom teams played excellent hockey when they competed in an eight team tournament. Dave Cousins and the Avalanche, after winning all three games in round robin play, were defeated in the final by Cold Lake, 3-2. Avalanche goaltender Kurt Kozicky was voted the MVP of the tournament.

The Pee wee Blades pulled their goalie in Bonnyville and lost a close one, 5-3. This coming weekend at home the Pee wee Blades host Mallaig on Saturday at 4:30 p.m. Come out and cheer the boys on. And don't forget to bring some money for "Big Ray's" 50/50s. Last week's jackpot of $105 was won by a fine gentleman, a loyal fan and big supporter of the teams.

And on Sunday, come on down to the Thunderdome to watch the Midget girls Storm in their first home game when they take on Lashburn at 1 p.m.

P.S. Up in the beer league, the B & R Bullets improved their record to 2 and 0 when they gave the Brodbin Broncos a 10 to 5 spanking last Wednesday.

Lions assist Curling Club

Elk Point Curling Club is looking good for the new season, thanks to a generous donation from the Elk Point and District Lions Club. The cheque, presented by Lions President Keith Campbell (right) to Curling Club representative Curtis Porcina, paid for a new paint job and new carpet upstairs and down. It looks great!

HIGH ENERGY GOES INTO OUR LOW-COST SOLUTIONS.

Seventy years in the business has given us a tremendous amount of knowledge. At Alberta Power, we work hard to keep your power rates among the lowest in Canada - even around the world.

We pride ourselves on our low rates and excellent service. Over the years, we've streamlined operations and increased productivity.

Daily, we generate cost-saving ideas for you. We've expanded our payment options and introduced PowerPlus™ - the automatic meter reading system that helps keep rates low by eliminating the manual meter reading step.

And we still have energy to spare.

Martyn Godfrey at Elementary School

It was a sixth grade student who first gave popular young people's author and former teacher Martyn Godfrey the incentive to start writing. The student, who didn't like school at the start of the year, but got "turned on" right after Christmas when he saw three space alien movies, asked Godfrey for books to read on that subject, and when none were available, asked why his teacher didn't write one, during the weekly double period when his students wrote stories of their own.

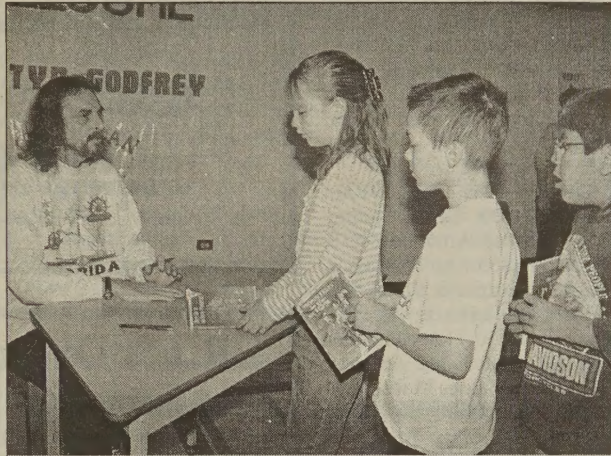

That story ended up taking not one afternoon, but six weeks to complete, and when he read it aloud to his students, they enthusiastically suggested he send it to Scholastic Books. The school secretary offered to type it for him, and Scholastic offered him a contract for his first book, "The Vanderian Incident," which is now in its eighth printing and finally has the title Godfrey meant it to have, "The Day the Sky Exploded."

His second book took three writings and three years to become saleable, and Godfrey decided to quit writing. Then one of his female students at Edson became the first of the large group of BMX bike hot-doggers to jump four garbage cans. That, combined with watching the Miss Universe pageant, inspired him to start writing again, with "Here She Is, Miss Teeny Wonderful."

"There's always some element of truth in my stories.. sometimes one word can give me an idea for a story,"

Godfrey told the Grade 3 to 6 students at Elk Point Elementary School last week. He has published a total of 37 books, from picture books to junior high novels, and said he is currently working on several more, including a comic book about dinosaurs. Many of his books came to school with these students, who eagerly lined up to get the autograph of this very popular young people's author.

YOUNG AUTOGRAPH SEEKERS mobbed young people's author Martyn Godfrey after his presentation at Elk Point Elementary School last Tuesday.

What's news at the library?

A buggy invasion at the Library Halloween Party!

By Michele Ducek
Librarian

There was a buggy invasion at the library this Halloween. Costumed kids lined up to whack a spider pinata. They tossed bugs at a spider web for prizes and, as a piece de resistance, went bobbing for spider webs. The morning's festivities were presided over by a black cat who bore a remarkable resemblance to the local librarian. It is not known whether the librarian undergoes a feline metamorphosis every year at this time, or if this was a once-in-a-lifetime event. The librarian returned to human form the next day and expects to remain that way until at least next Halloween. What she'll turn into then is anyone's guess.

When asked about the rumours that there were eyeballs floating in the punch, the librarian/cat responded, "No comment."

(There were also another cat, this one with a camera, and a Very Impressive Pig. What they were doing there is also a mystery.)

It's a little late, but here are a few Halloween titles in children's fiction: There's trouble when Jessica starts selling pumpkin earrings she claims are her design when it was really Elizabeth who designed them in Pumpkin Fever from Sweet Valley Twins.

The Scouts go through a succession of substitute leaders just as they are about to plan their big Halloween party in Halloween Helpers from Pee Wee Scouts.

Karen and her class get to decorate a haunted house for Halloween in Karen's Haunted House from Baby-Sitters Little Sister.

More in children's fiction:

Karen is angry that her friends aren't going to art camp with her so she makes up a mean puppet show about them in Karen's Puppet Show from Baby-Sitters Little Sister.

Adam and his friends are taken captive by huge crabs that have suddenly appeared on the beach in Attack of the Killer Crabs, the latest from Spooksville.

Amber Brown is excited about visiting her Aunt Pam in London until she comes down with chicken pox in You Can't Eat Your Chicken Pox, Amber Brown by Paula Danziger.

THANK YOU

The family of the late Gail Bendixen would like to thank the Elk Point Hospital staff for all their kindness and care for Gail during her illness, and to all the friends and family for visiting her in the hospital.

Also thank you to Bertha Fakeley for giving the eulogy, to Henry Botting for singing, to Pastor Greg Kern for officiating, and to all those who sent flowers, cards, made donations to the Canadian Cancer Society, and to those who brought food to the house.

OBITUARY

BENDIXEN, Gail Verna

Gail Verna Bendixen of Heinsburg passed away in the Elk Point Hospital on Saturday, September 6, 1997 at the age of 46.

Gail was born June 1, 1951 to John and Helen Rosychuk in Elk Point, Alberta. She lived and went to school in Elk Point, until she quit school to go to work for the Canadian Salt Company in Lindbergh, Alberta.

On October 13, 1973 she married George Bendixen of Heinsburg, and they made their home on the Bendixen family farm. They started their family on February 14, 1975 with birth of Arlene, then on March 18, 1977 with Denise followed by Marty on March 17, 1979.

Gail's primary interests laid with her family, and the activities they took part in. Most activities involved sporting events, such as hockey, fast-ball and volleyball, where she was the most dedicated fan. Gail herself participated in curling, as well as being an active member in the Heinsburg Community Club.

Gail leaves to mourn her passing her loving husband George, her three children: Arlene and her husband Vincent Nelson of Marwayne, Denise and her friend Sheldon Ballas of Marwayne, and Marty of Heinsburg; one granddaughter Madison Gail Nelson. Two sisters and one brother: Patsy and Ed Zarowny of Elk Point, Joanne and Rocky Sharkey of Heinsburg, and Bryan Rosychuk and Judy of Edmonton. Gail was predeceased by her parents Helen and John Rosychuk and one brother David.

The funeral service for Gail Bendixen was conducted from the Heinsburg Community Hall on Wednesday, September 10, 1997 at 2:00 p.m. with Pastor Greg Kern officiating. Interment followed at the Frog Lake Community Cemetery.

The honorary pallbearers were her good friends: Doreen Youngmans, Linda Romanchuk, Donna Bassett, Cynthia Blacklock, Linda Kjenner and Terry Hughes.

The active pallbearers were: Darrell Youngmans, Brent Roman-chuk, Doug Bassett, Brent Blacklock, Gerald Kjenner and Shawn Hughes.

Yewchin's Funeral Chapel Ltd., of St. Paul administered the funeral arrangements.
